

Zettler has added a new section to its website making life easier for Architects and Engineers, as they can now access all the documents and technical information they need in one easy to reach place.

After researching into how different consumer groups use the Zettler website it became apparent that there was a need for technical product information to be in one accessible place, saving time searching the site.

The new page is available via the main task bar on the homepage of the Zettler website and features information especially relevant to architects and engineers including:

- Specification text
- Consultants guides
- Datasheet archive
- Approval certificate listing
- Whitepapers
- Brochures and guides

Visit the new page here.

