

Tyco Fire Protection Products enhanced employee's product knowledge with a staff open day on the Zettler Roadshow Truck at Tyco Park, Manchester.

The Zettler Roadshow Truck has had a busy summer so far, having recently exhibited at Interschutz in Hannover, Germany it's now touring the UK, before it heads on to France, Poland and the Czech Republic. With a few spare days in Manchester, organisers invited staff on board to learn more about the latest developments in detection products.

Open for general drop in throughout the day and with scheduled live products demos, employees from all areas of the business came to experience the of state of the art detection products available from Zettler displayed throughout the Truck.

Mike Stonehouse, Technical Services Engineer, gave live product demonstrations, which included showing the difference between Zettler's single detector technology and triple sensing technology, detecting smoke, heat and CO. He explained that the triple sensing detector \(3oTec\) is perfect for hotel bedrooms, where bathroom steam is often a source of false alarm.

Visitors were also shown the ergonomically designed Zettler PROFILE panel, with its touch screen and intuitive info button interface. They also watched the new EN54-23 approved Visual Alarm Devices (VADs) in action, as it was activated in response to one of the demonstrations.

Also showcased inside the Truck was the new Augmented Reality feature. Triggered using an ipad on touchpoints inside the truck, visitors were shown a 360° virtual tour of a real hotel installed with the latest Zettler Products.

Naomi Peck, Fire Detection Products Marketing Manager for TFPP EMEA said: “It has been great to invite staff from all disciplines on to the truck to learn more about the technology used in Zettler’s Fire detection products, the history of Zettler and how we market Zettler in the industry. Some employees at Tyco work with Zettler’s products everyday but for those in different job roles such as HR or finance it’s invaluable to have this insight and understanding into the company they represent.”
